PUPILS at Mansfield's All Saints' School contended with gas masks, air raid sirens and ration book stamping as part of a war evacuees week.

Propaganda posters were put up all around the school and students ended last week with a traditional street party.

Said performing arts teacher and creativity lead Anna Ogden: "Evacuees Week has been a complete success, both staff and students had a hectic time but everybody came together to create an event we hope these young people will remember for a long time."
